THE DESIRE FOR STORIES.

From the "Once Upon a Time" Stage to "That Reminds Me."

Our earliest instinct is to ask for a story, our latest to tell one unasked. Human life is bounded at either end by a phrase; "once upon a time" at one end, "that reminds me" at the other. Above the first instinct we rise gradually, gradually declining to the second. Not that the narrative sense ever dies in us; only that in the plenitude of our powers we are not satisfied with a story that is nothing more than a story, a narrative for narration's sake.

The mind of a child is all agape for facts, for it is empty, and nothing is so quickly filling, so easily assimilable, as a dish of facts. Facts of fiction are preferred by the child to actual facts because they satisfy also its strong imaginative sense. Its moral and intellectual senses are still in abeyance. Deduce from any story "a moral" or an idea, and the child runs away rudely. There lies the difference between us and it. Our moral and intellectual senses are flourishing, and by their strength our imagination is proportionately weakened. Grimm is not enough for us. Our moral sense cries aloud for Hans Andersen. Dumas leaves us cold. Our mind needs Balzac. It is not enough for us that once upon a time there were three princesses or three musketeers who suffered or did some queer things. We want those triads to illustrate, to symbolize, to mean something, to corroborate or upset some theory that we have formed, to quicken our mind and affect our conduct.

Such are the prime needs of our maturity. Comes Time, mowing away with his scythe our intellectual and moral curiosity; nor does he restore to us our old imagination. He crops us bare of all but experience. Things that have happened—especially, old egoists that we are, the things that have happened to ourselves—are the only things that rouse us from our lethargy. "Anecdotage" is an ugly phrase. "Second childhood," less harsh, is not less exactly descriptive. For our last state, the state where narrative is absolute despot, was our first state too.—Max Beerbohm in Saturday Review.

WHY HE WASN'T PROMOTED

He watched the clock.
He was always grumbling.
He was always behindhand.
He asked too many questions.
His stock excuse was "I forgot."
He wasn't ready for the next step.
He did not put his heart in his work.
He learned nothing from his blunders.
He chose his friends among his inferiors.
He was content to be a second rate man.
He ruined his ability by half doing things.
He never dared to act on his own judgment.
He did not think it worth while to learn how.
He thought it was clever to use coarse and profane language.
He imitated the habits of men who could stand more than he could.
He did not learn that the best part of his salary was not in his pay envelope.—Success.

Speed of Birds.

Frequently arguments arise as to the speed with which wild birds fly, and many men of science have sought to determine something about it. Naturally it is impossible to fix the record made by such birds as grouse, quail and snipe when they first arise, but it is safe to say that they are not going one-half as fast as the luckless gunner who misses them imagines. With the migratory fowls of known fast flight, such as ducks and geese, something more nearly accurate is known. The green winged teal is about the speediest of them all. It does something like ninety miles an hour as readily as a sparrow dives into an inviting rainspout. The canvasback is only a trifle slower, probably eighty-five miles being its limit, while the black duck, mallard and redhead fall below this, being timed at about eighty miles. Still this is plenty fast enough to insure lots of misses unless the fellow with the gun looks down the rib straight and pulls the trigger at the right time.

Elephants and Mice.

An elephant is usually afraid of any small animal to which it is unaccustomed. A dog or cat, and sometimes even a mouse, will cause him annoyance, especially if it runs between the animal's legs. The noise of a mouse running through the hay will often cause an elephant to become excited, but I have never known or heard of a mouse getting on an elephant's trunk. The terrors of the mouse to a larger animal is an old story, and many foolish superstitions have arisen from it.—St. Nicholas.

A Synonym.

"Being a printer, Mr. Dash," said the hotel proprietor, "maybe you can advise me. I want to get a sign painted, 'Writing Room Free to Our Patrons,' or something like that."

"I don't like 'patrons,'" said Mr. Dash.

"No? Maybe that doesn't sound just right. What would you suggest?"

"'Victims.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

His Own Experience.

"Many a man would give a great deal for your opportunities," said the earnestly ambitious man.

"Of course," answered Senator Sorghum. "I had to give a great deal for 'em myself."—Washington Star.

The defects of the mind, like those of of the face, grow worse as we grow old.—Rochefoucauld

How to Save Money.

Take Advantage of Half Price Offer Made by W. W. Keyler.

In these times when living expenses have increased from thirty to fifty per cent, it is unusual to hear of a standard remedy being offered at half price.

Yet that is the way W. W. Keyler, the popular druggist, is selling Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of dyspepsia and constipation. In addition to selling a fifty cent bottle, containing a month's treatment of sixty doses for 25 cents, he gives his personal guarantee with every bottle he sells to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

This unusual offer has brought hundreds of customers to his store in the last few weeks, yet out of the many bottles of Dr. Howard's specific he has sold, but one customer has asked to have the money returned. This was done without any questions, although W. W. Keyler does not think the remedy could have been given a fair trial.

This remarkable remedy is destined to have the largest sale of any medicine upon the market, for those who use it once, not only buy a second package, but they recommend it to their friends as the only relief they have found for constipation and dyspepsia. The sole limit to its sale is the fact that in only chronic cases is more than one bottle needed to cure, and its cures are permanent.

Do not let this opportunity pass to obtain a standard fifty cent remedy at half price. Remember that Druggist W. W. Keyler will refund your money if Dr. Howard's specific does not cure.—Adv.

Basket-Ball.

The Oxford basket-ball team of this town traveled to Newark last Friday night and defeated the strong Atlanta senior team by the score of 16 to 12. The game was close and well played. The first half was ended in a tie, each team scoring 6 points. In the second half the ball was kept moving every minute, and the Oxfords won out 16 to 12. Smith, Bickler and Schulthess shot the baskets for the Oxfords, while Cannon and Simon made the point for the Atlantas. The line-up was as follows:

Oxford.		Atlanta.
Smith	right forward	Simon
Lancaster	left forward	H. Kapp'e
Krausmaul	centre	Cannon
Bickler	left guard	G. Kapple
Schulthess	right guard	Muller

The Oxford boys will travel to Brooklyn to-night and meet the Bay Ridge A. C. C. H. Lancaster has his strongest team together and expect to give the Bay Ridgers a surprise.

A basket-ball tournament between six teams composed of members of the Lyceum will start at Lyceum Hall this evening. It is under the management of an athletic committee of which Tim Johnson is chairman, and is sure to attract large crowds every Saturday evening. The team winning the largest number of games at end of tournament will receive a valuable trophy. To-night three games will be played by the following teams:

Team A.—T. Higgins, J. Durning, E. O'Neil, P. Segelkin, F. Lynch, M. Carroll, E. Byrnes. Team F.—T. Johnson, W. Finn, C. Merrian, J. A. Glennon, A. Johnson, J. Drudy, J. Mylod.

Team B.—G. Manderschied, E. Sweeney, J. Dunigan, John Glennon, J. Flanagan, F. B. Dailey, A. Belfi. Team E.—J. Cavanaugh, W. Costigan, E. Conroy, J. Conroy, J. Woods, W. Finan, W. McMillan.

The most popular player who will be selected by the spectators will be presented with an elegant and suitable present.

Thinks Price Too Low.

The City of East Orange, which some time ago opened negotiations with the Millburn Township Committee for the purchase of a portion of the latter's poor farm, which they desired to acquire for the driven well plant in the northern section of the township, submitted a price Monday night which it is willing to pay for the property. The committee says it was considered so slow that it was decided to pay no attention to the offer, further than acknowledging its receipt. The property in question is that of the farm lying along Canoe Brook, and contains about twenty-five acres. The city offered $2,500. The committee considered this the best part of the farm and that the selling of it would leave the place without water.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

"Life on the Bowery" is the subject of an address to be given on Saturday evening by Mr. Robert Honeyman, former Secretary of the Bowery Y. M. C. A., New York city. These gatherings are well attended, and an invitation is given to any boy or young man over thirteen years of age to attend. At the Saturday evening meeting Mr. Wm. C. Vail, the well-known organist of the Second Presbyterian Church in Newark will play piano solos. Revolution of 1863.

The forty-first anniversary of the revolution that took place in Poland in 1863 was celebrated by the Polish societies in this town Saturday night of last week in St. Valentine's Church. A vesper service was held early in the evening, at which Father Ivnow made a patriotic address. Following the vespers the children of the school connected with the church gave an entertainment, consisting of songs in Polish and English, and recitations and drills.

The members of St. Valentine's Society and the men's Rosary Society took part in the exercises, and the John Sobeski fife and drum corps furnished music. The Polish Ulans, a military organization, was largely represented, and the members were in full uniform.
